Killed by Work Train. Young McCarthy of Cres- ton Run Over.

At nine o'clock this morning young McCarthy, son of engineer McCarthy of the steam shovel, now working between here and Blairmore, was run over and instantly killed by the work train, which is auxiliary to the shovel.

The lad was taking a holiday and had only come from Creston a week ago. His body was almost cut to pieces.

The following jury was empanelled by Coroner Disney and is now sitting on the inquest. A. MacLeod, foreman. H. Ward, C. P. Willmott, W. Evans, W. A. Davidson, J. Graham.

The Verdict

We the jury find that Cecil McCarthy came to his death on Aug. 5th from injuries received by being run over by a C.P.R. train with no blame attached to person or persons.

TRAGEDY AT FRANK

Another bloody stabbing affair took place on Monday morning last at Frank. Salvatore Lavera while in a heated dispute with Frank Muruvanno pulled a knife and as a result Muruvanno is now believed to be dying in the Frank Hospital. The assailant has escaped.

R. R. Webb makes a Change

The fine new Eagle Hall which has cost upwards of ten thousand dollars will now be the home of R. R. Webb's drug dispensary. In addition to a complete dispensary the new stock carries an almost unlimited stock of medicines and sundries.

The toilet articles embrace waters, powders, perfumes, soaps and creams etc.

In the stationery department will be found a stock that should meet with the desires of any patron in Coleman. Holiday and musical goods have also been placed in stock.

Mr. Webb has recently installed a splendid soda water fountain and ice-cream parlor. Here is found the famous "Buttercup" ice-cream which is manufactured in Spokane. This ice-cream is absolutely sanitary and is renowned for its purity and flavor.

The whole entire ground floor has been leased by Mr. Webb and is fitted up to meet every requirement.

O'BRIEN SPEAKS

C. M. O'Brien again delivered two orations this week on revolutionary socialism. Mr. O'Brien has a great faculty of repeating former utterances, couched in different language each time. The only new material added this time was the disparaging remarks about the character of our late king.

If this language entitles a man to be a legislator of a self-governing British state, where are we drifting to? We regret that several spectators forgot themselves and applauded this disparaging of persons.

COLEMAN WEDDING

Early on Saturday, July 30th a pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. Disney when their eldest daughter Dorothy was married to B. J. Nicklin formerly sec-treas. of the International Coal and Coke Co. but now engaged in business in Vancouver.

The parlor was lavishly decorated with flowers. The bride who was given away by her father was supported by her sister Miss Amy Disney and the groom was supported by E. C. A. Crawford.

The bride was dressed in a bridal costume of pearl duchess mousselin covered with overskirt cut in points. She also wore a handsome gold watch the gift of the groom and in her hand carried a bouquet of bridal roses.

Only the immediate members of the family and a few intimate friends were present. Rev. W. G. Macmorine performed the marriage ceremony.

After the ceremony the wedding party retired to the dining room where a sumptuous repast was partaken of. As soon as the bride had cut the bridal cake she retired to don her travelling costume which was a beautiful tailored gown.

The happy couple left on the flyer at 8.30 a.m. for the coast cities amidst showers of rice and good wishes.

History of the Fires. Fire Fiend Swept Over a Wide Area.

The fiercest forest fires which have been raging for two weeks in the vicinity of Coleman are at last almost all extinguished. The air is still filled with smoke and the neighboring mountains bathed in deep obscurity.

It was on Sunday, July 24th, that the alarm was sent warning all that a serious outbreak of forest fire had taken place. The fires swept down McGillivray and Nez Perce Creeks and the situation was threatening for Coleman. When the wind veered the flames, soon made blackened patches on the north side of Saskatoon mountain. Coming back again they approached the Wilson ranch. No buildings, however, were burned.

Over 150 men turned out on that day to fight fires, the usual plan being to whip with brush or back fire. Fire guards were hastily opened out and a cordon was left to protect the remaining areas.

On Monday the 29th, Saskatoon broke out again and the timber on Nez Perce creek was all ablaze again. Fire guards checked the flames again. On Wednesday the guard was carried to Tiffin's ranch although the fire was still burning on Nez Perce Creek. It was considered a hard one and many were killed.

On Thursday morning the fireguard was continued east through some of the roughest country in Alberta. Dead trees lay in every direction. The underbrush was like a huge mat and work of making a fire guard rendered extremely difficult.

Near Gibson's mill the fire again broke out. This was the original point of ignition and smouldering heaps of ashes that lay secluded would now and then burst into flames.

On Saturday the fire guard was turned into the Lille trail where for a time the flames threatened the village of Lille. Saskatoon mountain again broke out but an officer and ten men whipped the fire into subjection. On Sunday the fireguard was watched and found to be holding at every point.

Coleman was threatened again this week as the fire fanned by the wind came back but by persistent back-firing the flames were almost wholly extinguished. The Tiffin ranch was threatened but finally the fire burned themselves out. A fire guard now completely encircles Coleman from Gibson's Mill on the West to Blairmore on the East.

Thanks are principally due to International and McGillivray Coal Companies and the Town Council for their work in subduing the flames.

A GLASS EYE.

It Turned the Scale in a Matter of Love.

By THOMAS R. DEANE.
(Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.)

I courted Jeannette abroad. There is no better field for love-making than traveling abroad, with nothing to do but enjoy oneself, or, rather, oneself, for "it takes two to make a bargain," so it takes two to make love. Jeannette and I met at Florence, where we met in a pavilion in the midst of an orange grove looking on the bay of Naples spread out several hundred feet below us. Spooky young men are always talking to spooky young women about sickness, and I found a convenient illustration in the ever changing hues of the Mediterranean. Besides, there is something in the Italian climate to quicken love. It is soft and balmy, yet the skies are bright and blue.

Then in Rome we dawdled through the Forum and set on the stone steps in the Coliseum just as you and I met at Florence, where we met in a pavilion in the midst of an orange grove looking on the bay of Naples spread out several hundred feet below us. Spooky young men are always talking to spooky young women about sickness, and I found a convenient illustration in the ever changing hues of the Mediterranean. Besides, there is something in the Italian climate to quicken love. It is soft and balmy, yet the skies are bright and blue.

From Rome we drifted into Florence and stood at evening looking over the stone copings of the Ponte Vecchio at the placid Arno flowing beneath us while the last rays of the setting sun gilded the neighboring hills. And— as I think I have remarked before—the Italian climate is conducive to love.

But I didn't say that about the English climate. The English climate is conducive to—let me see—English climate is conducive to colds, sore throat, rheumatism, the blues. I wonder that the English people ever marry for love, and I fancy there is less marrying there on that account than in any land on earth.

It may seem that this is not only disagreeable, but a digression. It may be the former, but it is not the latter. At any rate, it is a part of my story, for MY GAZE WAS FASTENED ON HIS GLASS EYE. Jeannette and I parted in Florence, having lighted our torch on the elevated Piazza Michelangelo overlooking the city. We were sitting beneath one of a dozen statues of David, each being the original statue, and came together again in England.

What a change, not only in the climate, but in us—I mean in Jeannette! In Italy she had been responsive to my slightest whisper. Indeed, the slightest whisper the better it accorded with our ineffectual surroundings. In England I, being hoarse, was obliged to speak with the voice of a megaphone, and she, being deafened by a cold, could scarcely hear me. Instead of leaning her head against my arm and looking up at me with a happy smile, as she had done in the Italian moonlight, speaking of poets and painters, she sat regarding me with watery eyes, saying that she wished it would stop raining.

This story goes to prove that what writers on the development of civilization say about the effect of climate on peoples is true. In Italy Jeannette and I had loved; in England the marriage question became one of practical advantages. I found that I was not as much in love as I had thought I was until Jeannette indicated that she was meditating giving me the grand bougie.

Young Lord Crickenback, who never appeared without a very large flower in his buttonhole, a very small silk hat on his head and a monocle on his right eye, was the man who taught me that, despite my present watery surroundings, I did not wish to surrender Jeannette. Why had I not continued to keep her in Italy, or why did I not insist on the knot being tied before coming to this land, where there is no sentiment, only interest? This Lord Crickenback had nothing whatever to recommend him except that he had a title. Even with his title on the sun, he had snapped my fingers at him.

Jeannette did not break with me. I think she would have done so had not the sun occasionally been with the clouds to restore the value of those big ears she had passed with me at Boronto, at Florence and at Rome. On such days I noticed a sudden demonstration of a dormant love for me that had not entirely died within her. I wished on such sunny days that there were some places where one could go similar to the Piazza Michelangelo at Florence or the Corso in Rome. But there are no such places in London. The most enjoyable in Hyde park, but the sun doesn't shine long enough to dry the benches. And a wet bench is no place for spooning. One bright day I took her to the Tower, and we sat together in the courtyard of the old pile. I was about to whisper something tender in her ear when she shuddered.

"What is it?" I asked concernedly. "That plate in the ground," it says that on this spot Lady Jane Grey, Catharine Howard and Jane Grey, executed."

We arose and walked away. Crickenback continued to hang about Jeannette, and it was with her that I wished that I might find some method of turning the scale in my favor. I usually been considered to have about the something of the resources for which we Americans are distinguished, but who ever heard of a man in love—really in love, I mean—being so much of a practical philosopher about anything connected with the winning or the losing of the girl he loves.

I met Wackford in London. He had just come over. Wackford and I have been bosom friends since we were in the kids. A man in love needs someone to talk to, and I talked to Wackford. I told him the whole story. He listened to me attentively, sympathetically.

"What you want," he said when I had finished, "is some device by which you can save the young lady from herself—and for yourself, understand?"

"That's exactly it."

"Very well. You show me this Crookedback, or whatever his name is, and I'll see what I can do for you."

The very next afternoon I drove with Wackford in Rotten row, and he said to me, "You can meet anybody that belongs to the upper classes in Rotten row."

"Yes, the fellow wears a glass eye," said Wackford.

"How do you know?"

"Can't tell the difference between a glass and a real eye? Of course I can. There—see the sun shining on it! Do you suppose I'm blind?"

"Don't know. I never heard her speak of it."

The next time I was with Jeannette I asked her, "Did Lord Crickenback ever speak of any misfortune, any mutilation?"

"No. Why do you ask?"

"Oh, nothing; at least nothing that it's my business to tell you."

"I said upon knowing."

I demurred for awhile, then told her what Wackford had said about his lordship's glass eye.

"I don't believe it," she said.

"You'd better ask him," I replied.

"Ask him? Do you suppose I would do that?"

Every time I saw Crickenback after that my gaze was fastened wily nily on his glass eye. I wondered if it had the same effect on Jeannette. I asked Wackford when he was going to give me the device he had referred to, and he replied:

"Don't know. Did you tell her about his glass eye?"

I admitted that I had, and Wackford turned the subject.

Whatever was the cause, Lord Crickenback from this time seemed to be losing ground with Jeannette. As he lost I gained. Then I perked up and played a different tune. This was followed by a battle between Jeannette and me in which she seemed pained, and eventually came a reconciliation. I determined to strike while the iron was hot and made it a condition of my forgiveness for her defection from me to Crickenback that we should be married at once.

We were married in London, Wackford being my best man. I insisted on a wedding trip to Italy, but since it was not now the season for visiting the far north we contented ourselves with Lake Como. While out in a boat one evening, pulled by an Italian oarsman who could not understand English, I asked my wife to make a clean breast of her part of the coming of Lord Crickenback between us.

"It was not in love with him," she said, "but a title to a woman is very tempting. I thought how nice it would be to be called Lady Crickenback and to be introduced to the real English nobility."

"And why didn't you do it?" I asked.

"Because I loved you, of course."

"How did you happen to come to a decision that you would rather have me and love than a title and no love?"

"Yes, I do."

"Well, it was the glass eye."

"You don't mean it?"

"Yes, for my life whenever I saw him after you told me he had a glass eye I couldn't keep from looking at it whenever he was with me. At last it grew so repulsive that I had to send him away."

"When he returned to London Wackford called on you."

"By the way, Wack," I said, "by giving me the fact of Crickenback's wearing a glass eye you fixed me up with Jeannette."

"He has two now."

"What do you mean by that? Is he insane blind?"

"No, he has left off his monocle and now he has two eyes."

I looked at Jeannette, and Jeannette looked at me; then we smiled.

"You wanted me to suggest something," said Wackford, "to break the Crickenback spell; did I give you the glass eye, which is synonymous with elegance. You owe me one."

GO SLOW ON BROOM CORN.

High Price of Crop Tempting Many Farmers into Untried Field.

The extremely high price of broom corn has aroused a widespread interest in the crop, says O. D. Center of the University of Illinois. Broom corn belongs to the same family as sorghum, Kafir corn, milo maize and Jerusalem corn, all of which are classified botanically as Andropogon sorghum. It differs from the other members of this group in having the seed heads much longer, straighter, stronger straws or branches. These form the brush, which is the valuable portion of the plant.

Broom corn growing now is and will always remain a small industry because the demand for the brush is not only limited, but small. This crop, then, is not a profitable one to include in a system of general farming. According to the best authorities, the world's consumption of broom is less than 50,000 tons, and as this brush is used but for one purpose there can be no sudden increase in the amount required. The total world's supply could be produced on 130,000 acres, and the territory and men equipped for and engaged in broom corn growing already could easily double the present production if the demand warranted.

Broom corn is marketed wholly in the bale. Throughout central Illinois there are numerous jobbers and commission men who do nothing but handle this crop. Because of dishonest practices in baling, large dealers and factory operators are cautious about buying except from established and reputable jobbers.

Broom corn is selling for as high as $200 per ton many novices who are attracted by the high prices will plant extensively this season. Without a working knowledge of the requirements of the crop and without the special equipment necessary for its successful handling the result of this extensive planting will be an enormous overproduction of broom, much of which will be of inferior quality.

It is seldom the man who undertakes a new line of business because of abnormally high prices who makes the money. It is the man who thoroughly learns a business and then sticks to it through high prices and low who comes out with the dollar. This being true, we must say that this is not a favorable time to embark in the business of broom corn production.

Planting Twice For Crop.

Soil that is very good for almost all crops if the seasons are seasonably wet and other conditions are favorable. One of the worst troubles with corn in our land is that the cutworms living in the soil destroy much of the young crop, and the corn next season will be late fall or early winter many of the cutworms will be destroyed; also when the land is plowed at this time the soil will have more time to settle and do so, and the corn next season will stand dry weather better. If the soil must be plowed again next spring no harm, but much good, will be done. Plowing any land twice for a crop or plowing and then plowing is labor well spent.

Beautify the Home Grounds.

Properly planting the right kind of trees, shrubs and plants on the home grounds means much more than mere beauty—it has a decidedly practical side. It is cheaper to beautify the home grounds than to allow them to grow up and be overgrown. Decorating the home grounds transforms a house into a home. It makes the house a part of a beautiful picture and surrounds it with such evidence of loving care that it immediately impresses the beholder with the feeling that people live in the house—that they do not merely exist there—Journal of Agriculture.

BREVITIES.

Scandal is a very effective selling cry.

Ten to one there is a surplus of lawyers, doctors and clerks in your country and a shortage of farm help.

The suggestion was made at a local English farmers' meeting that all poor farmers should be killed at public expense. Next!

A Pennsylvania woman buried her husband's wooden leg as the only way to prevent him from going to a saloon. The judge upheld her.

Well, sir, if people cannot get beef, pork or mutton at fair prices they will eat more eggs and chickens. Mrs. Hen is coming to the front.

The district judge told 18,000 persons attended the various farmers' institute meetings in New York last winter. Of course many of these attended several sessions.

In England the trade in women's "wears" has become so bad that parliament is asked for a law authorizing inspectors to kill all such animals that are found "doctored" or badly lame or diseased—Rural New Yorker.

THE NIGHTMARE.

A Ride on This Strangest Animal Is Generally Exciting.

The nightmare is one of the best known of all animals and one of the most feared. She is wilder than the tiger and more frightful in its appearance than the turkey buzzard. A young nightmare with no previous experience can fling a 200-pound man over his flanks and carry him all over the south sea islands and the Gobi desert in less time than it would take him to look them up on the map.

The nightmare is so called because she is always ridden at night. She is somewhat timid, but may be easily caught. Mix up a little real fake, some mayonnaise and some real pastry and you can catch her with a pinch pie for a bait. She is not a chicken salad and for a variety of other temptations.

Once the nightmare is caught it is no trouble to ride her. It is no fun either. The nightmare usually wears a green and blue striped shirt, studded with red hot nails. She rocks like a ship in a gale as she dashes from mountain peak to mountain peak. The rider soon loses his hold and slides down, only to find sharks and cuttlefish awaiting him. The oldest child before breakfast. The nightmare is a very dangerous animal to ride. He is always more severe upon members of the family than the rider. Lord Gladstone's Nickname. The curious nickname "Tuppence"—by which Lord Gladstone was known at Eton arose through his father's taking twopenny of the income tax. Occasionally the name was applied to "Hoodie." Another name by which Lord Gladstone was known at school was "The Pocket Hercules," bestowed upon him by Lord Randolph Churchill, on account of his partiality for eleven seconds.

Lord Gladstone first stood as a Parliamentary candidate for a division of Midland in 1875. He was a very young man at the time, and his only body thought of as a joke. "I say, Mary, I've beaten shall you find out. And when the name was heard, it was beaten by 5,000."

An Old-Time Encyclopedia. An ancient encyclopedia was that compiled by a Chinese. In 1603 an Englishman, Sir Thomas Herbert, ordered that such a work should be undertaken, and in 1610 the 100 volumes were ready for printing.

The encyclopedia was a very large work, and it was a very expensive one. It was a very large work, and it was a very expensive one. It was a very large work, and it was a very expensive one.

Family Pedigrees. Speaking to the students in an English lecture, an educator said: "Dig out all your family skeletons. Your relatives will probably be anxious to keep them out of sight. Make out your pedigree, tracing your family back to your great-grandfather. You will find out what traits to avoid and what diseases to guard against. It takes time, but it is worth it. It is worth it. It is worth it."

The Hunter and the Guide. Every year there goes into the wilderness a large number of hunters and guides. Some of them come back, and some of them do not. There is a great deal of talk about the hunter and the guide, but it is all talk. It is all talk. It is all talk.

Balm of Gilead. The real balm of Gilead is the dried juice of a low scrub which grows in Syria. It is very valuable and scarce, and it is very expensive. It is very valuable and scarce, and it is very expensive.

Needless Fears. The slovenly young man was patronizing the barber shop manœuvre. "Don't you know, the thought often strikes me when I'm getting shaved," he chuckled, "what a terrible position I'd be in if the barber suddenly became a raving maniac?"

"Oh, I don't think anybody will ever go crazy over you," said the lady sweetly. "I don't think anybody will ever go crazy over you."

Letter Boxes in France. The modern French letter box has the shape of a pillar, profusely ornamented with flowers and leaves. The whole box or stand is fashioned after a plant, and the top resembles a flower. The box is surrounded by floral wreaths, festoons, and the base is formed by large leaves. The boxes are placed against buildings and have a very pretty effect.

When Melbourne Was Scared. Melbourne has never seen any real fighting, but it has had several scares. It has had several scares. It has had several scares.

Sassy Food. An anecdote which we think ought to be made public and to enter into history is hereby presented. A certain man has been doing a great deal of work. He was contemplating undertaking still more, and a friend observed that he looked too hard he would break down.

"Me!" he said. "Me! break down! I don't think these cocktails, I don't think these cocktails, I don't think these cocktails. In my opinion he came very near analyzing correctly the man's strength."

Japanese Weddings. An Important Preliminary Is the Advice to the Bride. A Japanese wedding does not establish a new home. It only adds to the family of the bridegroom. The Government gives official recognition to this custom by transferring the bride's name from the register from her own to her husband's family, so young Orio does not bring Miss Gorysanthum to his own little dove, but to his father's house.

At the door of this house the little bride to be is formally surrendered by her own family. Before the actual wedding ceremony takes place, however, there is an important preliminary to be observed—Miss Gorysanthum must drink tea with her mother and the wife of the go-between. This lady might be called the bridesmaid, but the Japanese wedding knows no bridesmaids in the western sense. There is, however, a little girl in attendance, called the "kitty," who has important duties to fulfill.

While the three women are together the bridegroom is to give his bride some final advice on her little ride in her new home—how to honor her husband and how to look on the right side of her mother-in-law, a personage who is just as important in Japan as she is with us.

Men quote from the Japanese "Great Learning for Women," the reverend old classic which sets forth the female conduct. "The great lifelong duty of a woman is obedience. In her dealings with her husband both her expression and her countenance, the style of her address should be courteous, humble and conciliatory, never peevish and intractable, never rude and arrogant. Never set herself up against her husband with harsh words and a belligerent voice."

This seems to insure the young husband getting his own way without any bickering or nagging, but it may be that the old Japanese told the young bride how to bend Orio even while she seems to obey him and how to make him when she appears to follow as is the way of women, the world over—Wide World Magazine.

A Japanese wedding does not establish a new home. It only adds to the family of the bridegroom. The Government gives official recognition to this custom by transferring the bride's name from the register from her own to her husband's family, so young Orio does not bring Miss Gorysanthum to his own little dove, but to his father's house.

At the door of this house the little bride to be is formally surrendered by her own family. Before the actual wedding ceremony takes place, however, there is an important preliminary to be observed—Miss Gorysanthum must drink tea with her mother and the wife of the go-between. This lady might be called the bridesmaid, but the Japanese wedding knows no bridesmaids in the western sense.

There is, however, a little girl in attendance, called the "kitty," who has important duties to fulfill.

While the three women are together the bridegroom is to give his bride some final advice on her little ride in her new home—how to honor her husband and how to look on the right side of her mother-in-law, a personage who is just as important in Japan as she is with us.

Men quote from the Japanese "Great Learning for Women," the reverend old classic which sets forth the female conduct. "The great lifelong duty of a woman is obedience. In her dealings with her husband both her expression and her countenance, the style of her address should be courteous, humble and conciliatory, never peevish and intractable, never rude and arrogant. Never set herself up against her husband with harsh words and a belligerent voice."

This seems to insure the young husband getting his own way without any bickering or nagging, but it may be that the old Japanese told the young bride how to bend Orio even while she seems to obey him and how to make him when she appears to follow as is the way of women, the world over—Wide World Magazine.

Gordon's Rose-Tree at Khartoum. Of the actual work of Gordon's hands, there remains but a rose-bush in the palace garden, which, hewn by the malice of his enemies, sprang to life again with the coming of spring.

It is affectionately tended by an old Sudanese sergeant, who was one of Gordon's men, and stands in the middle of an extremely peaceful oasis that indulgent climate on the banks of the dark river which carries down from the cornucopia of Abyssinia the water that fertilizes the growth of gardens is tropically exuberant.

This rose-tree was found blooming before the first of the second day after its red victory at Omdurman, a British army, horse, foot, and camel, was left a blank white, and the war, besides the last earthly habitation of Charles Gordon, so that the religion of the Sudanese kingdoms, the most solemn funeral service ever read over a general killed in battle, with one of his own old gunboats, was a solemn funeral service.

Each roulette table in Monte Carlo has a chief, an underchief and seven croupiers. The roulette croupiers are ordered to keep their hands spread out open upon the table between the turns. This is designed not only to protect the players from the croupier, but to protect the bank against its own employees. Once it was found that a croupier who seemed inordinately fond of snuff had a pocket full of snuff boxes. Every now and then he would set it down on a gold piece, and when he took it up the gold piece was inside. Another croupier was discovered to have a sort of funnel under his collar, which he used to draw to a money belt. Every now and then he would scratch his neck, and every time he did so the bank lost 20 francs.

A Rather Dull Pearl. There is an anecdote in J. A. Hamilton's "George Meredith in Anecdote and Criticism" which hints at the possibility of the great novelist's fountain of talk being sealed at times.

A lady who had been on terms of intimacy with the novelist was greatly charmed on one occasion to find him visiting there to find that Meredith was to be one of the guests at dinner. She prepared herself for a rich gathering of the celebrated and the witty talk. But he was singularly silent throughout the visit, and the only Meredithian phrase that came out of his mouth was his remark when reaching across his neighbor for the salt: "Excuse the picnic stretch."

Gamboge. Gamboge is one of the artist's most important yellows. It is the gum resin of a tree which bears yellow flowers and leathery, laurel-like leaves. The name of the pigment indicates the country from which it came, for gamboge is simply a corruption of Cambodia or Camboja. In this far eastern country it is that grows wild and sheds those sticky tears which help the artist to paint the sunrise and the sunset of the woods.

Gamboge was brought to Europe by merchants from the east toward the end of the sixteenth century—London Answers.

Needless Fears. The slovenly young man was patronizing the barber shop manœuvre. "Don't you know, the thought often strikes me when I'm getting shaved," he chuckled, "what a terrible position I'd be in if the barber suddenly became a raving maniac?"

"Oh, I don't think anybody will ever go crazy over you," said the lady sweetly. "I don't think anybody will ever go crazy over you."

Letter Boxes in France. The modern French letter box has the shape of a pillar, profusely ornamented with flowers and leaves. The whole box or stand is fashioned after a plant, and the top resembles a flower. The box is surrounded by floral wreaths, festoons, and the base is formed by large leaves. The boxes are placed against buildings and have a very pretty effect.

When Melbourne Was Scared. Melbourne has never seen any real fighting, but it has had several scares. It has had several scares. It has had several scares.

Sassy Food. An anecdote which we think ought to be made public and to enter into history is hereby presented. A certain man has been doing a great deal of work. He was contemplating undertaking still more, and a friend observed that he looked too hard he would break down.

Japanese Weddings. An Important Preliminary Is the Advice to the Bride. A Japanese wedding does not establish a new home. It only adds to the family of the bridegroom. EDITORIAL NOTESThe continued dry weather is causing continued anxiety.C. M. O'Brien M.P.T., in the course of a street address, reiterated his remarks on the character of our late king. The whiskey box which our voluble friend used as a pedestal turned crimson and the sides grouched, likewise the audience.C. M. O'Brien has decided to cut his address down to two hours and forty minutes when Sir Wilfrid visits Coleman. The section on "Modern Methods of Methodists" will be left out altogether, as every citizen in Coleman has committed it to memory. The subsection on "panics" will receive careful attention as the last panic caused a rise of 2c. per 100lbs. of wheat. Charles works by the sweat of his tongue.Dysentery is a dangerous disease and can be cured. Chamberlain's Colic, little does.Injured in Pincher Mine.A man named Alex. White was brought to Lethbridge on Friday last, and is now lying at the hospital in a critical condition as the result of an accident at the Beaver Creek Coal mine. As near as can be learned respecting details of the unfortunate happening, White was in a car at the mine when another miner called to him, and on White raising himself to converse with the other man

the car, continuing on its course, he was struck by the top of the gallery. Either from the position he had taken or from some other cause, White was doubled up and when resuscitated from his fearful predicament was terribly bruised in nearly every part of his body.
The unfortunate man was battered and broken in several ways and the pain he endured must have been excruciating.
Grave fears are entertained at the hospital for his recovery.
It was first reported that the accident was the result of a cave-in at the mine, but such was not the case.When the digestion is all right, the

Railway at Pincher Creek

Pincher Creek, Aug. 4.—True to their word, the railway people arrived here on Saturday morning. J. A. Taylor, the New York banker, the leading spirit in the movement, and the man who is responsible for all the activities up to date, was accompanied by two other interested parties in the new road. Others have since arrived, seven in all being the number at present here, including surveyors. With the arrival of these railway builders there has been more or less stir in the community, and everything in connection with the business is taking a rosy tint.

The company have rented the large residential premises of John Herron, M.P., to be used as their offices here, and when the surveyors have gone over the route, grading contracts will be awarded after being previously advertised.

There is every indication that the builders of this new road means business from the word go, and numbers of those who were doubtful as to their bona fide intentions, have become converted to a firm belief in the genuineness of the whole undertaking.

Mine Incorporated

Incorporation papers have just been filed by the Black Diamond Collieries, Limited, who have acquired coal mining rights to seven sections, 4480 acres on the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Ry., about 60 miles West of Edmonton, Alta, and a mile from the town of Entwistle.

There are three seams on the property, one of four feet, one of five and one of fifteen feet, of a high grade of lignite coal. The coal seams are exposed along the bank of the Pembina River for a distance of ten miles, the seams varying in thickness from 12 to 20 feet. The Pembina River passes the property about a mile to the west.

The Sharp & Irvine Co. of Spokane, Wash., who own the controlling stock in this Company, announce that development work will start on the property at once.

"Why do you always insist on white veal for a stew?" asked the butcher of the boarding house mistress. "Because it makes such good chicken sandwiches the next day," she replied.

Golter on the Green (after several attempts to hole the ball)—"What shall I do, caddie?" "Caddie—"I should get down on my knees and blow it in!"

WHAT NEGLECT DID FOR HIM

JAS. E. BRANT SUFFERED TORMENTS FROM KIDNEY DISEASES

Then He used Dodd's Kidney Pills and Became a Well Man—His Experience a Lesson for You.

Athabasca Landing, Alta.—That Kidney Disease, neglected in its earlier stages, leads to the most terrible suffering, if not death itself, and that the one sure cure for it in all stages is Dodd's Kidney Pills, is the experience of Mr. James E. Brant, a farmer residing near here.

Mr. Brant contracted Kidney Disease when a young man, from a strain, and, like hosts of others, neglected it, expecting it to go away itself.

But it kept gradually growing worse, till after thirty years of increasing suffering the climax came, and he found himself so crippled that at times he could not turn in bed, and for two weeks at a time it was impossible for him to rise from a chair without putting his hands on his knees.

He could not button his clothes. He was troubled with Lumbago, Gravel and Backache, and dried medicines for each and all of them without getting relief. At last he turned to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Dodd's Kidney Pills started at the cause of his troubles and cured his Kidneys. With cured Kidneys his other troubles speedily disappeared, and today he is a well man.

If you cure your Kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills you will never have another attack of Kidney Disease, Gravel or Bright's Disease.

Scottish Guest (arriving suddenly at the bottom of a somewhat difficult staircase)—"Well, the manner that designed this house might have been an architect or he might not; but at any rate, the terrible climb he has been a teetotaler."

SIERRA LEONE DANCERS.

Girls Smear Mixture of White Earth and Grass on their Faces.

In the Sierra Leone district of western Africa is a secret society known as the Bundia, to which are attached dancing schools. The girls of the village become members of this society when they are about 9 or 10 years old, and stay there for three or four years. They are looked after and taught by an elder woman, and live in a sort of convent or retreat, never leaving its precincts unaccompanied by their diuana.

So great is the reverence for this society that no man dare get his foot within the sacred precincts. If he did, death would probably be the punishment of his curiosity. The girls pay an entrance fee, and during their stay are initiated into the secret tribal customs. They have a special costume, consisting of strings of big beads made from a long, thin cane round their waists, and their high coiffure is adorned with bunches of round, black, shiny seeds.

The costume worn when the girls are sufficiently advanced to give public performances consists of a sort of netting covering the body, with bunches of palm-leaf fringes swinging from the plaited bandages entwining their arms. Charming are suspended from the neck, and to various parts of garments are fastened little bells, the rings which tinkle as the dance goes on.

It is, however, not so much in the dress as in the manner in which the dancers decorate their faces that the Sierra Leone dancers are peculiar. A mixture of white earth and grass is smeared upon the countenance, and their quaint devices are traced upon the cheeks. The girls are graceful and swing their bodies in time to the beat of a tom-tom made out of a gourd.

A Daring Boy.

A splendid type of the cool, intrepid Englishman is Mr. Graham-White, whose exploits have aroused so much enthusiasm. Fear seems to be unknown to him. At Bedford Grammar School, where he was educated, he became one of the most daring and successful cyclists. Indeed, he used to win so many prizes at the school sports in the bicycle races that in the end he was prohibited from entering for these contests. When again, when he was thirteen, he and his elder brother, Montague, becoming possessed of a small motor-car, set off for a fortnight's tour in the north of England during the summer holidays, without saying a word to anyone. As Mr. Graham-White's mother, who was his constant companion, truly says: "For a boy it was a wild and dangerous adventure, but he came back smiling and full of health and spirits, and was forgiven."

After soldiering about the world for many years, an Irish officer at length left the army, and went to settle on the family property in the Green Isle. Some of the old servants were in difficulty, day to day, to dispose of what had been born and bred at the place was not to be thought of.

The horses were the worst. The horses were scrawny, the carriages were worn out, the stable wasn't fit for a cowhouse, but there was only fit for pigs, and so on.

But everything, he was told, would be put right, including a new cottage for himself, and a new house for the man who went home and delighted his wife with the news. But after supper, by the fire, with his pipe in his mouth, he began growling and grumbling.

"Well, what's wrong with ye now?" said the wife.

"I'm a miserable man this night," he muttered. "Begorra, I haven't a single grievance left."—Blackwood's Magazine.

The Wedding Guest.

A peculiar observance prevails in the Bellary districts in connection with weddings in Malabar Brahmin families, which occupy the better part of a fortnight. On a particular day towards the close of the festivities, a fantastically robed in rags, supposed to represent the bridegroom's father, is carried along the streets in procession, and is followed by a band of men with tassels such as onions and margarine-leaves. During the procession the feet of the deity have to be reverently washed and its forehead decorated with garlands and flowers. The bridegroom's father, in relations have several mock attempts paid to them by the women of the bride's party on these privileged occasions.

Where Most Rain Falls.

Recent reports indicate that Cherrapunji, in Assam, and Debnaga in the Kameron, hold the record for heavy rainfall. During the period from 1890 to 1900 inclusive, the average yearly rainfall at Cherrapunji was no less than 30 feet 9.13 inches. For the same period at Debnaga the average yearly fall was 25 feet 1.13 inches. The rainiest year ever recorded at Cherrapunji was 1861, when 41.2 feet of rain fell.

On June 10, 1902, at Debnaga, 18.15 inches of rain fell during that single day. These immense falls of rain are attended by the formation of tropical cyclones approaching close to lofty mountains.

ELEPHANTS AS LABORERS.

They Work in Forests and Mills preparing Timber for Market.

In the lumber yards and saw mills of India, elephants are employed to do in great part the work of the men. In the forests and at the ports also these big creatures handle the timber. They drag the logs of the streams and arrange the beams; they stack the planks, and they carry all sorts of lumber at the direction of their masters. Every saw mill has its elephants and there are some companies which employ several hundred.

The average institution, however, employs but few, for the animals are costly, a green one bringing $800 and a prize worker often as much as $2,000.

The elephants come from the forests of Upper Burma, the wild ones are all owned by the Government, which has an elephant department to catch and care for them. The elephant commissioner keeps track of the wild herds and annually sends out men to hunt them and catch the young bulls.

These huge beasts handle logs of great weight, and in the case of the writing of scenes he has visited. "An elephant would knock down before the middle of a log, cross his trunk over it, and then throwing his great trunk over the top, would raise it bodily and carry it to the truck upon which it was to be pushed to the buzz saw. If the log proved very heavy he would rest one end on the ground and another on the trunk of the saw, and would lift the timbers up and lay them down on the others as evenly as though it had measured the logs with its trunk. In some cases it was necessary to carry two logs at a time the men tied a rope around them and the elephant would pick up the end of the rope with his trunk and place it over his back and then, raising his head, would push the logs forward with the trunk and lay them on the trucks.

At the lumber camps they not only carry the logs to the streams, but aid in forming the rafts and booms. They wade or swim about, according to the needs of the work, towing the logs this way and that. When the logs come to the ports they break the water by pushing on the logs with their trunk and put them on the cars, which carry them to the mill.

In some cases the elephants gather up the scraps of lumber and lay them so that the workmen can rope them into bundles. They also work at loading the boards and loading for the steamers. Lord Rothschild's Influence. A pleasing story of late appropos of the prestige of the great house of Rothschild in London. One of the circles of London. A young son of a noble house was given a letter of introduction to Lord Rothschild. It was stated that the young man, though undoubtedly talented, had had the misfortune to be thoroughly thrown by his beam-end owing to the death of his father, who had succumbed to grief on account of his bankruptcy. The young man, Lord Rothschild, to do his very best for a deserving case. After having read the note, Lord Rothschild took the young man by the arm, and walked with him from the Rothschild residence in St. James's Lane, past the Bank of England, through Throgmorton street, and past the Stock Exchange, introducing him to the most powerful and well-known bankers and financiers. Then, shaking hands with him, he wished him "goodday."

Three Distinguished Brothers. Although he probably had high hopes for his sons, it is doubtful if John Dewar, the Pot Stillier, had hoped for one moment that they would attain the high positions they at present occupy. One, Sir John, was made a baronet three years ago. Sir Thomas was knighted in 1902, and now Arthur Dewar, K.C., M.P., Solicitor-General for Scotland, since 1900, has been appointed a Scottish judge. There are few more powerful members of the House than Mr. Dewar, and it is interesting to note that when he entered the field of politics as candidate for South Edinburgh in 1890 his opponent was the late Gen. W. Chichester. The contest was a sharp and exciting one, and notwithstanding the popularity of the general, Mr. Dewar was returned with a handsome majority of 821.

The largest of the pyramids, which is at Giza, is called Cheops, because it is supposed to have been the name of the builder. It is built of a royal mausoleum or tomb, and it contained chambers for the bodies of the king and queen. The measurements are 744 feet on each side, and its height is 481 feet. Scientific men estimate that the building must have required 100,000 men for 20 years.

Wealthy Man, Unlucky Sportsman. Though the world has treated him well enough in most respects, Lord Elmsford has the reputation of being one of the unluckiest of sportsmen. It would be hard to count the number of times he has been justifiably brought to important events. His horse have come in second in the Derby, the Oaks, the Goodwood Cup, the Epsom Derby, and the Epsom Derby.

Have you your expense account? "Have you your expense account?" asked the junior member of the firm. "No," answered the commercial traveler. "My expense account is in my new overcoat."

That relieves my mind. My partner has just been to the bank to get a new overcoat, and he has just been to the bank to get a new overcoat.

The Doctor's Answers

By Dr. Lewis Baker.

The questions answered below are general in character, and symptoms of diseases are given, and the answers will apply to any case of similar nature. Those wishing further advice free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Elliott St., Dayton, Ohio, enclosing self-addressed envelope for reply. If unable to obtain any of the drugs mentioned of your regular druggist, go to some prominent large retail drug store which is sure to be well stocked.

Arthur F.—I am quite grateful for your kind words, and am glad to know you tried the prescription for stomach disorders. A good way to treat catarrh at home is: Boil a pint of warm water add a teaspoonful of salt, sniff this water through the nostrils morning and night until thoroughly cleansed. Blood treatment should also be taken and for this purpose try: Fid. ext. saw palmetto 1 oz., compound fluid balmwort 1 oz., fid. ext. buchu 1 oz., aromatic elixir 8 oz. Mix, and take a teaspoonful before or after meals and at bedtime.

Alvin G.—Use a teaspoonful of boric acid to a pint of warm water for sore and inflamed eyes; wash twice daily.

Sam K.—I have frequently given the following formula for such cases as yours. It is a thorough, powerful tonic, and perfectly harmless to the system, even if used for a long time: Compound syrup of hypophosphites 3 oz., tincture cadomene comp. 1 oz., mix, shake well, and take a teaspoonful before meals to improve the appetite and on at bedtime. This improves the blood, makes pink cheeks, red lips and greater nerve control for men, women or children.

Eugene—Yes, I know a very thorough and reliable treatment to cure dandruff, itching scalp, falling hair, etc. Druggists do not generally have it in stock, but I will give the name. It is plain yellow mineral. It costs 30 cents for a four-ounce jar.

Agnes M.—Since you received so much value from my previous prescription, I am going to give you a prescription which will increase your flesh and round out your figure, bringing the physical charm that goes with a well nourished body. This will usually make pink cheeks, red lips and buoyant health. Comp. syrup of hypophosphites 3 oz., essence of pepsin 3 oz., tincture cadomene comp. 1 oz., and compound essence cardiol 1 oz. Mix, and take a teaspoonful before and after meals. Continue a several months if necessary. After the first few weeks you should increase 1 to 3 pounds each week.
